Five years ago, the section “The Latest Books on Globalization” made its appearance within the pages of “Glocalism: Journal of Culture, Politics and Innovation”. In that issue (2016, 3), we underscored the fact that the books published on globalization continue to raise interesting questions which reflect upon the very complex nature of the process we are facing. We have since started to discuss some of these questions through a brief presentation of selected books, followed by a longer bibliographical list of works regarding the topic published within that particular period of the year.

“Glocalism” is a journal published triannually and so each issue of this section has dealt with the titles published within this interval. Since its inception, we have covered approximately four hundred books published mostly in English, but also in Spanish, German, French, Italian and Portuguese. This number gives an idea of the richness of a field of study which is far from being out of date. The intellectual reflections on the process of globalization are still valuable and are appreciated in all fields of study – today more than ever.

“The latest book on globalization” has the aim of producing a map of the newest titles. Starting in 2021, this section will host book reviews as always in all the three issues of “Glocalism”. Only the third issue will offer the usual bibliographical list collecting all the titles published throughout the year. In this way, we will continue with our best efforts to help scholars keep themselves up to date.
